MICKLEGATE BAR, YORK. The chief of the four original gates, a work of the Decorated period, but in 1826 it was reduced to its present dimensions by the removal of the barbican. A square tower, pierced by an archway, it has circular embattled projecting turrets at the angles, each surmounted by the figure of a man-at-arms. Up to the middle of last century, the outer gate was guarded by a massive iron chain, and a strong double wooden gate was closed every night at 10. Here Hotspur's head was exposed in 1400, and those of Jacobite rebels in 1746.
